Wrinkless T6

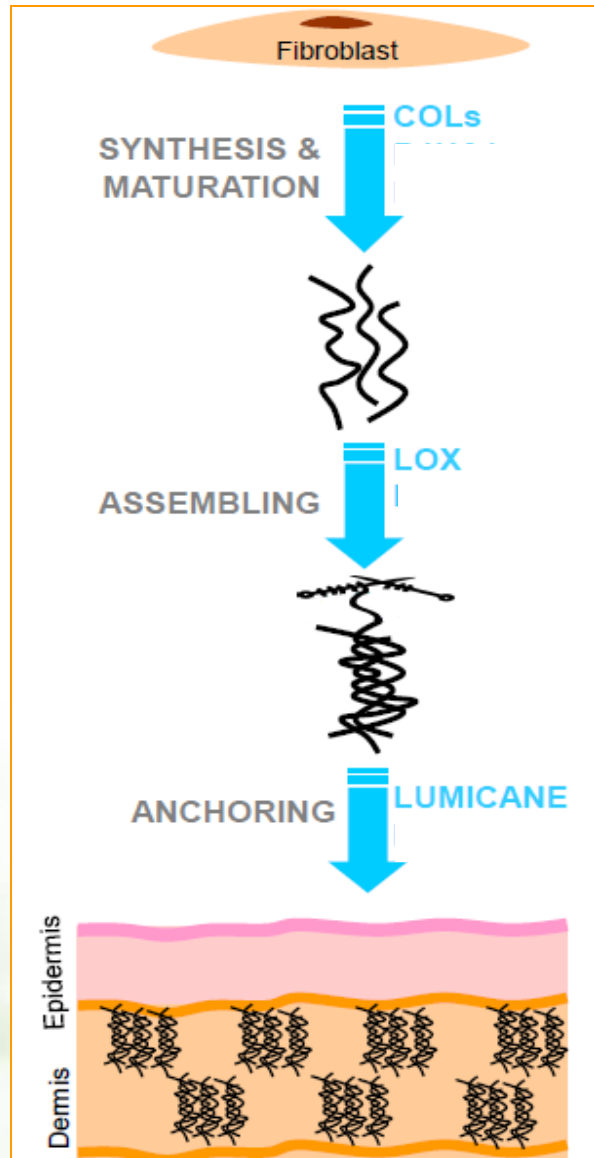

Collagen has a powerful toning effect.

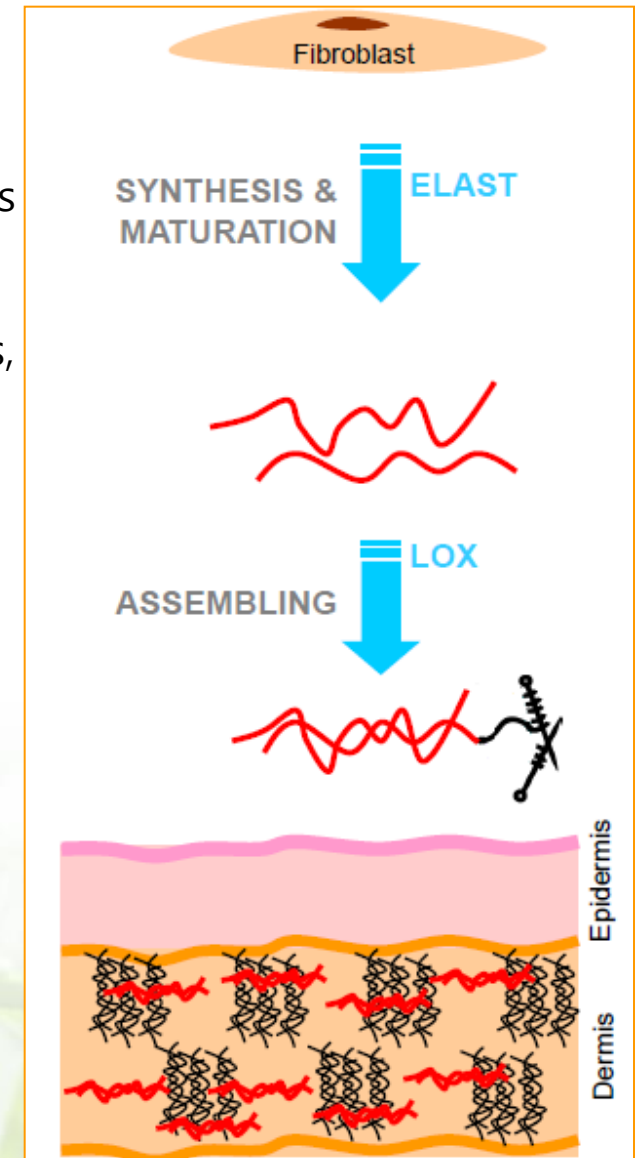

- Synthesised in the dermis by the fibroblasts, it forms a matrix which provides resistance to tension applied to the skin.
- It is responsible for the mechanical properties of the dermis and thus the tone and elasticity of the skin.
- Its synthesis declines progressively with age accompanied by a slackening of the tissues.

Mechanism

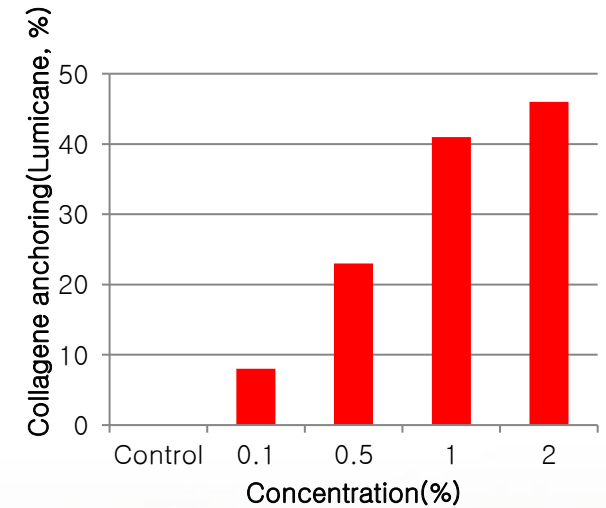

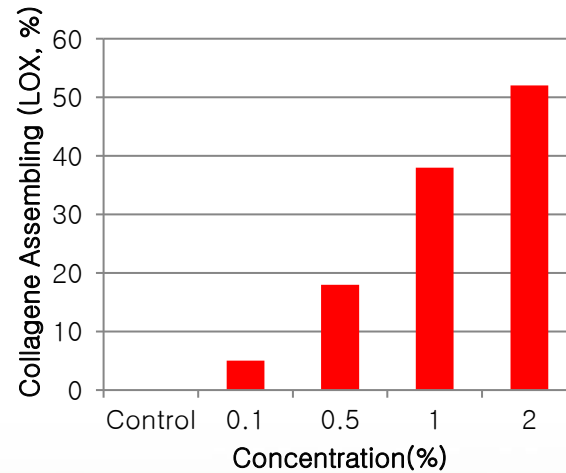

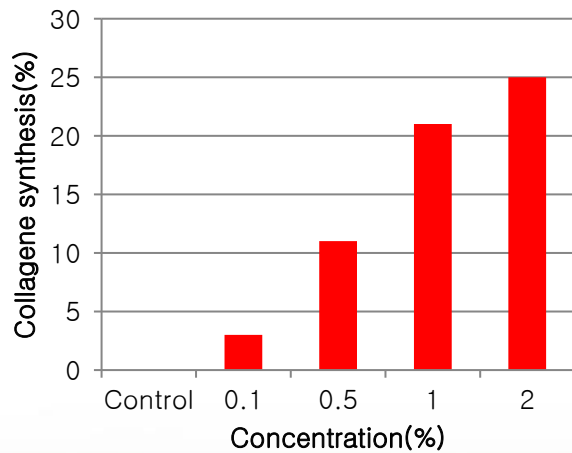

Wrinklean T6 stimulates genes implicated in collagen synthesis, maturation and anchoring.

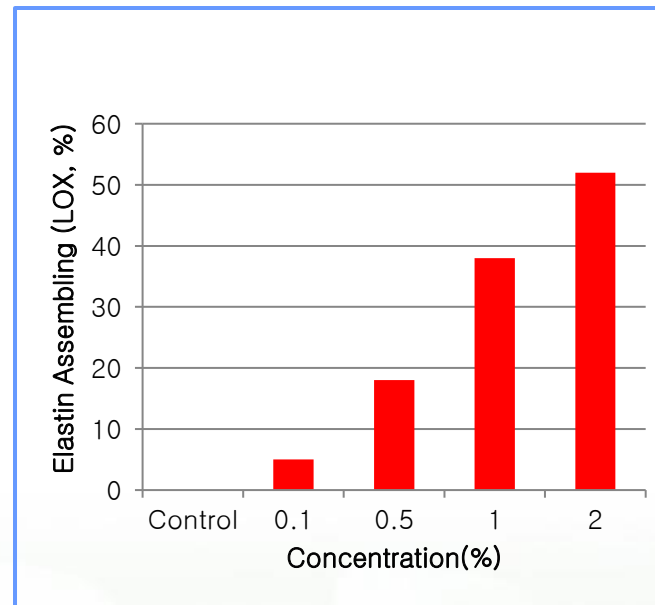

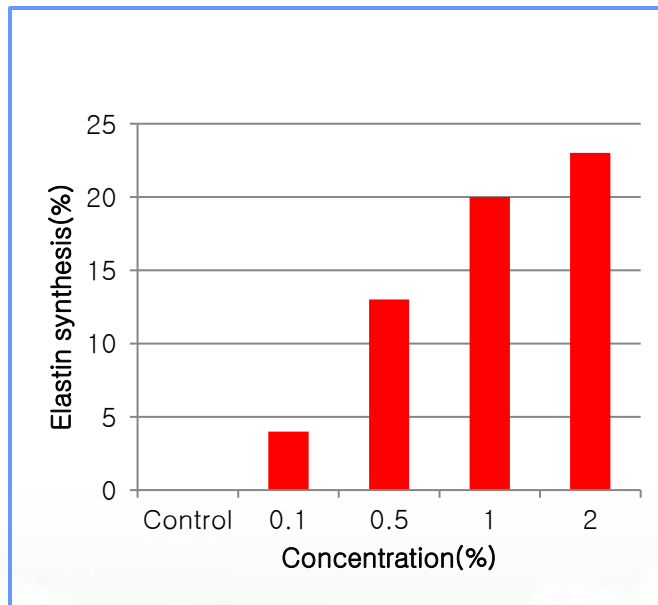

Wrinklean T6 stimulates genes implicated in elastin synthesis, maturation and anchoring.
